Introduction by Graça Machel

Dear friends and supporters,

I am proud to have worked with the Trust for several years now, particularly on our scholarship programme. I know at first hand the excellent work it does in support of postgraduate students from all over southern Africa. And both through its programmes and through the Graça Machel Scholarships, I have seen the difference it makes.

I'm one of those who knows better than anyone the value of a scholarship. I received one in 1969 to study in Lisbon and this transformed my life. I was convinced then and I remain convinced now that education is key to unlock one's potential. Therefore we must support those who seek it at all levels.

In this Annual Review you will read many inspirational stories, both about the individuals the Trust has been able to support through its scholarship programme and also about the impact of their work on the lives of others.

But there is another story here too, and that is the story of the Trust. This year the Trust merged with the Legal Assistance Trust to become the Canon Collins Educational and Legal Assistance Trust. This is the story of an organisation that is forward looking, dynamic and adaptable. It is committed to the wellbeing and prosperity of all the peoples of southern Africa. I share its belief that an educated people are best able to assert their human rights – and that the defence of human rights is the best way to ensure that people enjoy the right to an education.

The Canon Collins Trust has put itself at the heart of this mission. I look forward to continuing our work together and wish the Trust every success for the future.

With best wishes,
Graça Machel

Canon Collins Trust at 30

Professor Sir Bob Hepple QC, FBA, Emeritus Master of Clare College, Cambridge

The bare statistics about the scholars supported by the Trust over the past 30 years do not reveal the effort and achievement of each of these women and men. In nearly 20 years as a Trustee (1989-2008) I read many hundreds of heart-rending applications revealing poverty, study by candlelight in poor social conditions to support siblings whose parents had been taken by HIV/AIDS, lack of educational and job opportunities because of the legacy of 'Bantu education' and other hardships. There are always far more applicants worthy of a scholarship than the Trust can afford to support. Those who come to the UK endure homesickness, loneliness and financial need in order to complete their studies. Yet, with the support of the Trust, they study hard and achieve the aims of improving their skills and qualifications, as well as broadening their minds by exposure to different cultures and ideas, and developing their confidence and self-esteem. They return to serve their communities in many ways, for example by working to improve public services, providing health care, fighting corruption, aiding industrial and agricultural development, and training others. Some of our scholars have achieved high political or civil office, but the vast majority make their extraordinary contributions to southern Africa outside of the public eye. These include medical professionals working in remote clinics, human rights activists in political exile, and educationalists working closely with the most marginalised children. Education and skills development is the key to bringing about social and economic change and reducing inequality and poverty. Canon Collins Trust has supported many community projects as well as individual scholars, and in its new connection with the Legal Assistance Trust, it will continue to play a vital role in the peaceful development of southern African society and the economy.

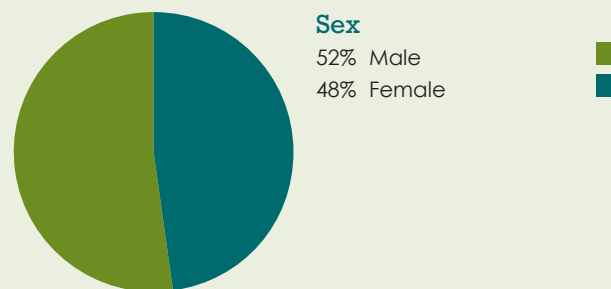

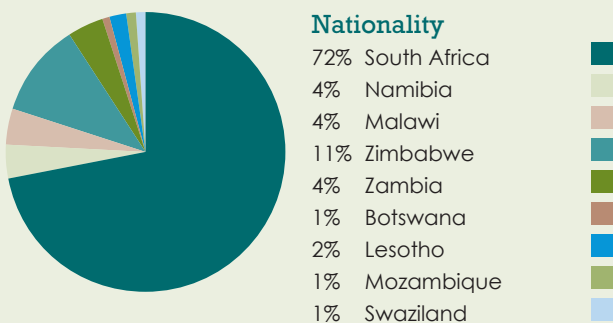

Ethel's List

In April 2012 we marked our 30th Anniversary, and the tenth Anniversary of the Leigh Day Scholarships, with a party at the Brunei Suite at SOAS. We were joined by more than 150 supporters for a wonderful evening of celebration. Invitees were taken from the personal address book of the indomitable Ethel de Keyser (pictured), founder and director of the Trust for twenty-five years. Speakers, including Victoria Brittain, Lord Joel Joffe and Russell Levy, spoke warmly of Ethel and the early days of the Trust.

Canon Collins Trust Scholarships 1981-2012

Canon Collins Trust has awarded 2645 scholarships since 1981. These went to South Africans and Namibians until 1994, after which we widened our programmes to include applicants from all over southern Africa.

Events

Graça Machel Scholars and Canon Collins staff gather with Mrs Machel and other speakers at the Graça Machel Women's Leadership Retreat in Johannesburg, May 2012.

Graça Machel Retreat

In May 2012 we held the 2nd Graça Machel Women's Leadership Retreat in Johannesburg. This brought together nearly forty Graça Machel Scholars and Alumni from across southern Africa, including three doctors, several teachers, lecturers and scientists, a lawyer, an accountant, and two economists. Led by Mrs Machel herself, the Retreat included interactive workshops, inspirational speakers and networking, underpinned by the theme of embodying change. Participants heard from African women leaders in a wide range of fields, including Phumzile Mlambo-Ngcuka, former Deputy President of South Africa, Ory Okolloh, Policy Director at Google Africa and Michelle Ndiaye-Ntab, former CEO of Greenpeace Africa and now Managing Director of the Mandela Institute for Development Studies. After intensive workshops and discussion, scholars and alumni chose a set of four guiding values for leadership: excellence, commitment, integrity and action. They then established a framework of collective and individual goals explaining how they will embody these values in their workplaces and communities. We thank HSBC and the Commonwealth Foundation for making this extraordinary weekend possible.

Kader Asmal

In October 2011 we were pleased to be part of the event held at the South African High Commission to celebrate the life of Kader Asmal, renowned human rights activist, member of Mandela's first cabinet and one of the architects of South Africa's constitution. We compiled a booklet of speeches in his honour by Seamus Heaney, Louise Asmal, HE Azwindini Jeremiah Dinga Ndou and others. It is available from the office for a suggested donation of £5.

An evening at St Paul's

In July we held the first annual Canon Collins event at St Paul's Cathedral in London. This felt in many ways like a homecoming, as our founder John Collins was Canon of the Cathedral for 33 years. Three UK scholars presented their work: development economist Nshalati Hlungwane (pictured), renewable energy expert Collen Zalengera and artist Sharlene Khan. Their presentations were followed by a lively question-and answer session. We then enjoyed a drinks reception which provided an opportunity for informal discussion between scholars, supporters and partners.

Projects

Director of the Nceduluntu Reeston Support Group Xoliswa Schreiber (turquoise t-shirt), pictured in Mdantsane, East London with community care workers, March 2012.

Small Projects Foundation, South Africa

The Small Projects Foundation works to build the capacity of community-based organisations in the Eastern Cape. In 2011 Canon Collins entered into a new three-year partnership with SPF, which will see us fund training for eight small organisations. SPF work with the organisation to build a tailor-made training schedule to suit their needs and those of their beneficiaries. Training sessions on offer include mother-to-child HIV transmission, care of orphans and vulnerable children, and sustainable funding strategies. One of the organisations receiving training in the first year was the Nceduluntu Reeston Support Group, run by Xoliswa Schreiber. The Group run a range of services including support groups for abused women and a day care service. They are the first line of support for over a thousand orphans and vulnerable children in the community, providing a vital link to clinics.

Elizabeth Bird Resource Centre, Chancellor College, Malawi

Family and friends of Dr Elizabeth Bird raised funds to establish a resource centre in her memory at the University of Malawi's Faculty of Education in 2011. Elizabeth was an inspirational teacher and leading researcher with a deep commitment to education in Africa. This new project has enabled the Trust to further develop its partnership with the University of Malawi, providing much needed resources to the Faculty. It is a fitting tribute to Elizabeth, who championed higher educational initiatives, especially teacher training, as a means of empowerment for Africans across sub-Saharan Africa.

Giyani Science and Careers Centre, South Africa

The Giyani Science Centre is directed by Canon Collins alumnus Norman Mthembu. Equipped with a suite of science and IT labs, it provides valuable enrichment and computer lessons for learners from underprivileged rural areas of Limpopo province. It is the only centre of its kind in the area, and its facilities are an invaluable resource for communities where most schools do not have adequate science or IT facilities.

The new Giyani Careers Centre, generously funded by JPMorgan, opened its doors in February 2011. Its aim is to provide advice to students as they make key subject choices in high school which affect their eligibility for further study. Housed within the Science Centre complex and staffed by two dedicated volunteers, the Centre had a very successful opening year. It exceeded all its targets to reach an average of 1000 high school students a month at more than 100 schools, as well as offering specialised sessions for teachers.

AGLIT, Malawi

The Trust has worked with AGLIT, the Adolescent Girls Literacy Project in southern Malawi for several years. In 2011 we were successful in securing DfID funding for a major project which aims to address school drop out. The project, under the directorship of Canon Collins scholar Joseph Pafupi, kicked off in January 2012 and runs for 3 years. It will include a significant element of research and collaboration with our partners at the Faculty of Education, Chancellor College, Zomba.

An Organisation for our Time

At a meeting on 26 July, after a long period of consultation with partners, funders and beneficiaries, the Trustees of Canon Collin Trust decided it would be in the best interests of the Trust to merge with the Legal Assistance Trust. The Trustees of the Legal Assistance Trust reached the same decision and we are now a single organisation, the Canon Collins Educational and Legal Assistance Trust.

Unusually the proposal to merge came not because either Canon Collins or the Legal Assistance Trust were experiencing financial difficulties but because both were in robust good health. Both Trusts had their roots deep in the long struggle for liberation in South Africa and Namibia. Since 1994 we have pursued parallel paths. The only question was how best to achieve our mutual aims and, in view of our common ambition and our shared history, this can best be done by a single organisation.

The Legal Assistance Trust has done its work in public interest litigation and defence of the constitution through its long and close relationship with the Legal Resources Centre (LRC) in South Africa. It is currently the grants-holder of three large grants from Comic Relief in support of the rights of urban people to adequate housing, the rights of people living with HIV and AIDS and in defence of women and children who suffer various kinds of violence.

On the education side, we regard our investment in our scholars as an investment in a rights-based agenda and for us the opportunity to merge was an opportunity to build on our scholarship programmes so that we can deliver greater impact and benefits for our beneficiaries and our donors.

In recent years we too have worked closely with the Legal Resources Centre. We currently support a number of research initiatives either at postgraduate or post-doctoral level. This research, into fields such as the rights of pre-trial detainees, or the rights of artisanal fishing communities in South Africa, will underpin public interest litigation being planned by the LRC. We will now also take on the grants-holder role for the Comic Relief funded projects.

And so, we are now working to an expanded set of charitable objectives. These are:

1. the advancement of education for the benefit of the public and in particular the advancement of education of the people of southern Africa with a particular emphasis on South Africa
2. to provide for the relief of poverty by the provision of funds for legal services for poor persons in countries outside the United Kingdom and with a particular emphasis on southern Africa
3. to promote research into the law and procedure of foreign legal systems as they affect poor persons and to publish the results of such research with a particular emphasis on southern Africa
4. such other general objects as are charitable by law.

In practice this means we will continue to invest in new generations of leaders from southern Africa and at the same time we will invest in programmes in support of public interest litigation and law. More generally the merger creates a new, vibrant and healthy organisation committed to the ideals which sustained our past struggles for national liberation. We currently support over 100 scholars and we hope to renew and expand this commitment. At the same time, through our work with Legal Resources Centre, we hope to build on our many successes and to play a leading and active role in the ongoing transformation of southern Africa.

Canon Collins Trust and Human Rights

Canon Collins Trust has always had a strong commitment to supporting those who defend human rights, dating back from the early 1980s when the scholarship programme supported anti-apartheid activists and their families. Human rights and the justice system continue to be a priority area for our scholarships, and we are delighted to count a number of brave and dedicated lawyers and activists among our alumni. More recently, our interest in human rights has seen us expand our law scholarships programmes, fund a project to catalogue human rights abuses in Zimbabwe, and host international events on issues of gender and disability.

"Without strong and visionary leadership the battle against repression and poverty will never be won. Canon Collins Trust has worked tirelessly to develop southern Africans to be leaders in their fields by providing access to education."

Nelson Mandela

Leigh Day Law Scholarships at the University of the Western Cape

The Trust has a strong partnership with London law firm Leigh Day & Co which funds law students from previously disadvantaged backgrounds at the University of the Western Cape. The programme celebrated its 10th anniversary in 2012. It has now supported a total of 55 students, including Thendo Tshivengwa (pictured).

Lesotho

Graça Machel Scholar Phaello Malataliana (pictured) is completing a research Masters in Education at Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University and is also the Assistant Commissioner at Lesotho Correctional Services. She is working on setting up a mentoring programme for incarcerated women to assist them with the transition into society after prison.

Malawi

Levi Mvula (pictured) studied for his MA in Theory and Practice of Human Rights on a Canon Collins scholarship at Essex in 2008-2009. His knowledge proved immediately valuable for his country, as evidenced by his involvement with the Universal Periodic Review, a new UN human rights assessment. "Many in government, the (Human Rights) Commission and NGOs in Malawi did not understand the mechanism", Levi wrote. "After all, it was the first time Malawi was undergoing through the procedure. So I had to rely on the knowledge I gained from my classes to influence reporting by government and NGOs. I believe that from that experience, Malawi will do better during the next round of reporting in 3 years time."

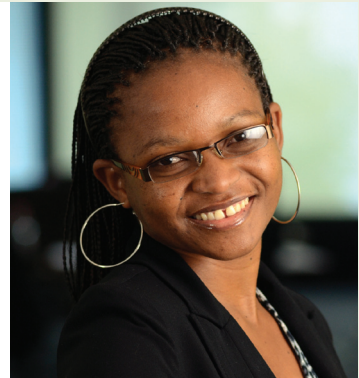

"Canon Collins Trust has been at the forefront of supporting education in southern Africa as a tool for liberation and development."

Dr Maano Ramutsindela, Chair of the Canon Collins South Africa Boars and Canon Collins Scholar 1996-1999 (PhD geography, Royal Holloway).

Zimbabwe Association

In 2011 the Trust funded the Zimbabwe Association to catalogue its ten-year archive of human rights abuses in Zimbabwe. Canon Collins has supported many Zimbabwean human rights activists in recent years, among them Prisca Mudimba (pictured), currently studying for her LLM in Social Justice at UCT.

Legal Resources Centre

Through the merger with the Legal Assistance Trust, Canon Collins Trust is proud to have a new partnership with the Legal Resources Centre, a South African public interest law firm based in Johannesburg. We currently have two scholars working at the Legal Resources Centre on research to support human rights cases being fought by the LRC. This work is generously funded by the David & Elaine Potter Foundation. We have also taken on three large national-level Comic Relief-funded projects being implemented by the LRC. These initiatives combine community workshops, litigation, advocacy and other measures to tackle three of South Africa's most pressing human rights challenges: HIV/AIDs, the rights of women and girls, and the right to decent housing.

Canon Collins Scholars 2011

It is characteristic of the Trust that we continue to run an open scholarships policy. In 2011, however, the Trustees approved four priority areas where we will focus our support and where we can have the biggest impact: Law and Human Rights; Leadership in Education; Conservation and Biodiversity; and Leadership in Public Health.

In 2011 we formed new partnerships with three University of London institutions: King's College, Queen Mary, and the School of Oriental and African Studies. Canon Collins scholars have studied at all of these institutions in the past, and we are delighted to now have annual arrangements in place for one scholar per year at each. We maintained our relationships with long-standing British partners at the Universities of Edinburgh, Sheffield, Leeds and Sussex. We continue to act as a nominating agency for Commonwealth Scholarships, and also continued our arrangement with the Edinburgh Business School to select scholars for their MBA programme through distance learning. In South Africa, we marked the tenth year of the Leigh Day Scholarships at the University of the Western Cape. We expanded our work in the conservation and biodiversity sector through a new collaboration with GreenMatter, a South African NGO, to administer their major new fellowship programme. We also started a new arrangement with Wits for an annual scholarship for the Honours in Development Theory and Policy, and another with the Legal Resources Centre in Johannesburg for scholars to conduct research to support human rights litigation.

"I appreciate the support that I received from Canon Collins Trust right from my scholarship applications. You were like a family to me and I am very grateful."

Booker Waya (Malawi), MSc in GIS for Catchment Dynamics and Management, University of Leeds 2011-2012.

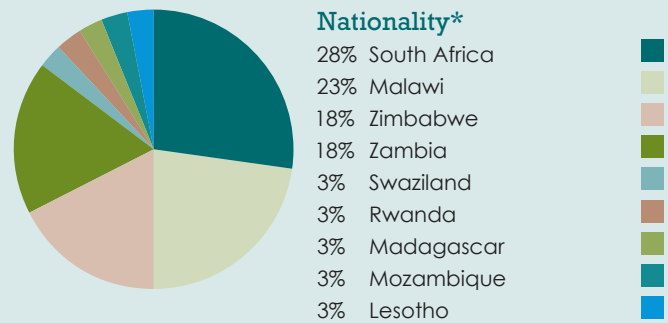

Joseph Pafupi (Malawi), Canon Collins Scholar 2011, MPH (Public Health), Health Director of AGLIT.

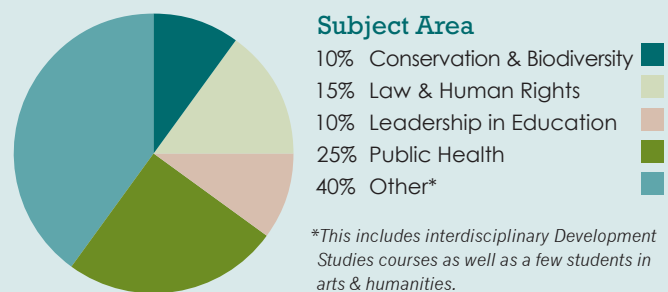

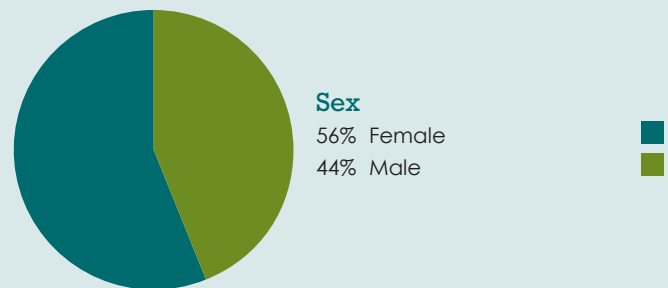

Vania Matola (Mozambique), Canon Collins Scholar 2011, MA Analytical Techniques and Innovation in Tourism, Universitat Rovira y Virgili, Spain.

In 2011, 39 people from across southern Africa started postgraduate study on Canon Collins scholarships, in addition to the 87[†] already studying and the 48 new Canon Collins-nominated Edinburgh Business School MBA students.

Alumni

Gillian (PhD Development and Ecotourism, Wits 2003) and Moeketsi (PhD Philosophy of Education, Institute of Education 1998) after the race.

The Scholars' Scholar

Canon Collins Alumni Moeketsi Letseka and Gillian Attwood tackled the London Marathon in April 2012, to raise money for the 'Scholars' Scholar'. This is a new scholarship entirely funded by alumni, which we will award for the first time in 2013. We are already building our alumni team for the 2013 marathon and are looking forward to being able to make the 'Scholars' Scholar' an annual award.

Alumnus profile: Alisa Amupolo

Alisa Amupolo (Namibia), MA International Communications, University of Leeds 2007-2008.

"I was given an opportunity to spearhead the establishment of the Communications Regulatory Authority of Namibia (CRAN). As a first and founding member of the team I served in a uniquely challenging situation due to the complexity of the sector anchored by a rapidly evolving technology. I hold a strategic advisory role in the implementation of a new regulatory framework leveraging the best of regional and international regulatory trends and models for adaptation to Namibia. On a personal basis, I have registered a company in Namibia called Amustra, an international operation management and advisory service. My aspiration is to shape international economy and politics to the benefits of all global citizens, especially in the field of ICT."

Malawi Canon Collins Alumni Association

In January 2012 we celebrated the formal establishment of the Malawi Canon Collins Alumni Association. The Association is chaired by Dinah Katonda (pictured), a Senior Primary School Inspector and Advisor who was a Canon Collins Scholar in 2009-2010 at Chancellor College, where she completed an MEd in Education Leadership, Policy and Planning.

Breakfast Meeting with Scholars and Alumni, Cape Town March 2012

On the 2nd of March 14 CCT scholars and alumni from the greater Cape Town area met at UCT to get to know each other better and meet some of the members of the CCT UK and SA Board, as well as the CCT Alumni Officer, Gillian Attwood. UK board member, Shula Marks, gave scholars and alumni the 'historian's perspective' of the Trust and how it has developed from the 1980s. Alumni had a chance to talk about what they have been doing since graduating and scholars shared their enthusiasm for and experiences of their studies. Everybody enjoyed the opportunity to meet the 'real people' who represent the Trust and breathe life into the work it does.

"Receiving a Canon Collins Trust scholarship has changed me for the better in so many ways. My career has progressed and my knowledge about development has vastly improved."

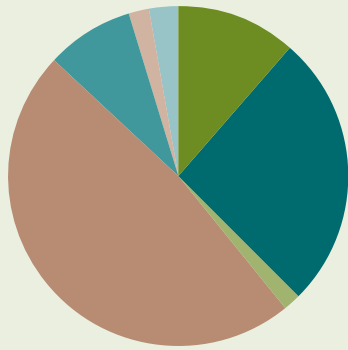

Zilani Khonje (Malawi), MA Communications, University of East Anglia 2010-2011.
